Festival of the Flowers

Festival de las Flores in Medellín, Colombia, celebrates the country's beautiful flowers. The festival takes place every August and lasts for about ten days. The celebration includes parades, a pageant, and, of course, amazing flower arrangements.

Colombians first celebrated the Festival of the Flowers on May 1, 1957, when 40 peasants formed a parade to show off the colorful flowers they carried from town to town. However, summer is the season when Colombians celebrate their independence from Spain. So in 1958, officials moved the festival's date to celebrate the two holidays together.

A popular event during the festival is the parade of silletas, or huge flower arrangements. One of the best things to do during the festival is watch the sillateros, or the flower workers, create their flower art.

Another popular event is the horse parade, or the cabalgata de las flores. Over 7,000 horses and riders participate in the three-hour-long parade. The horses and riders are decorated in blue, red, and yellow—the colors of the Colombian flag. Not only is the horse parade amazing to watch, but it also holds the record for being the world's largest horse parade in the Guinness Book of World Records.
